BU dean to join Boston School Committee

Mayor Thomas Menino on Thursday announced a new addition to the Boston School Committee.

Dean of Boston University School of Education Dr. Hardin Coleman will complete the term of John Barros, who stepped down from the Committee in April.

The vacated term ends on Jan. 6, 2014.

Menino said Coleman brings "a unique blend of expertise and experience" to the committee.

"I am honored to appoint an individual with such exceptional, outstanding credentials, skills and experience," he said. METRO

Staties: Bulger ran gang, had big arsenal

Whitey trial. Day two of the Bulger case included testimony from two state police investigators.

Alleged mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger violently ran a gang that would beat and even kill bookies or drug dealers that failed to pay them, two leading organized crime investigators from the Massachusetts State Police recounted during their testimony Thursday.

Retired state police investigators Robert Long and Thomas Foley testified Thursday as the government's first two witnesses against Bulger.

Foley talked about how, before he became colonel of the state police, he ran the agency's special services unit investigating organized crime. He said the unit had informants giving investigators information on the activities of Bulger.

He identified the Winter Hill Gang and the La Cosa Nostra, or the Italian mafia, as the two main organized crime groups in Boston in the 1980s and 1990s. Foley identified Bulger and his associate Stephen Flemmi as the leaders of the Winter Hill Gang once the other heads became fugitives.

Foley said the crime groups made their money mostly through bookmakers and drug dealers who were forced to pay "rent" or "tributes," which were fees for operating in a certain area.

When asked by Assistant U.S. Attorney Fred Wyshak what happened if the bookies or drug dealers didn't pay, Foley said the group turned violent.

"A beating, or sometimes people were killed," Foley said.

Small arsenal

The government introduced dozens of pictures of guns, ammunition and other items recovered by investigators.

- Among those items were a sawed-off shotgun, double-edged knives and a Boston police officer's badge found inside a safe.
- However, during cross-examination, Foley said no guns, masks or other items were found in Bulger's home.

Injured MBTA officer to be released from rehab

Fond farewell. MBTA officers are expected to see off Dic Donohue as he heads home.

Transit Police Officer Richard Donohue was expected to head home Friday, after spending nearly one month at Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital recovering from serious injuries he sustained in a shootout with the Boston Marathon terror suspects.

Donohue's femoral artery was severed, and he suffered tremendous blood loss before going into cardiac arrest. He had surgeries on both legs, and now, two months later, Donohue has been dealing with severe pain due to nerve damage.

"The [transit police] department, as well as Dic and his family, are very excited that he is going home. He has a ways to go in his recovery, but we'll be there to show our support," Transit Police Superintendent Joseph O'Connor said Thursday.

The 33-year-old was transferred to the new Charlestown facility after undergoing surgery at Mount Auburn Hospital in Cambridge, where doctors faced the grueling challenge of bringing back a man who had lost nearly all the blood in his body.

"We are very proud of the way he has handled this, as is his family," O'Connor said. "He's been very strong in his recovery, and he's had tremendous support all around him."

Smile earns MBTA rider a monetary prize

Good deeds. A random act of kindness on the MBTA pays off for a Roslindale mom.

Judy Colon may just be the friendliest MBTA passenger out there, and on Wednesday, after countless smiley commutes, it literally paid off.

Keeping it positive

"I'm always smiling, and I always try to be nice to people. There is no reason to show the world that you're upset. Everybody deserves kindness." Colon

The 23-year-old mother of two was with her daughter at North Station around noon when suddenly she was approached by an older man bearing good news.

"He said, 'This might sound weird, but I set myself to a good deed. The first person that smiles at me will get $50, and you've won,'" said Colon, a Roslindale resident.

He handed her a crisp 50-dollar bill, told her to keep smiling and walked away.

Colon said she hardly had time to thank him.

"I would have asked him his name, but he walked away so fast. It was such an amazing, inspirational gesture, and I just want to extend my thank you."

Survey. Gays report more acceptance from society, but room for progress

The majority of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender adults say society has become more accepting of them in the past decade, according to a poll billed as the first-ever major survey of its kind in America.

However, although 92 percent of those asked saw progress, many said bias remained common, according to the Pew Research Center's report. Two in 10 people said they have been treated unfairly by an employer because of their sexual orientation or gender identity, and three in 10 say they have been physically attacked or threatened. While six in 10 said there was some acceptance, two in 10 said there was a lot of social acceptance. Two in 10 said there was "no acceptance." REUTERS

Mueller says US will hold Snowden responsible on leak

Hearing. The FBI director says Snowden harmed national security when he divulged the secrets.

FBI Director Robert Mueller said on Thursday that the U.S. government is doing everything it can to hold confessed leaker Edward Snowden accountable for splashing surveillance secrets across the pages of newspapers worldwide.

"As to the individual who has admitted making these disclosures, he is the subject of an ongoing criminal investigation," Mueller said without naming Snowden.

Snowden is believed to be in Hong Kong after flying there last month from Hawaii, where he lived. He has said he plans to request asylum and that he divulged secrets to the Guardian and the Washington Post because he believed the surveillance programs were illegal and intrusive.

The U.S. Justice Department has opened a criminal investigation into the alleged disclosure of classified information. It has not revealed any charges or an extradition request.

Mueller added his voice to the Obama administration's defense of the surveillance programs, which he said comply in full with U.S. law and with basic rights guaranteed under the Constitution.

The information in a massive government database of daily telephone records has been instrumental in identifying people who sought to harm Americans, Mueller said.

The program collects "no content whatsoever" beyond data such as numbers called and the time and length of calls, he said. REUTERS

Chain. Microsoft to open Windows stores within Best Buy in US

Microsoft said it would open 500 special stores, within existing Best Buy stores in the United States, selling exclusively Windows-based tablets and computers and other Microsoft products in an effort to revitalize sales of its flagship operating system.

The world's largest software company, which already has a chain of 70 or so of its own Microsoft stores and kiosks within shopping malls, said on Thursday the initiative would add more than 1,200 Microsoft-trained Best Buy sales associates to help customers.

Microsoft's new Windows 8 operating system has sold more than 100 million copies since its launch in October, but sales of new tablets and PCs running the software, and its own Surface tablet, have not been as strong as it hoped. An updated version called Windows 8.1 is scheduled for release later this year. REUTERS

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

CNN=POLITICS

DULL AS DIRT

Intent on expanding my limited grasp of social media, I have stepped up the number of people I am following on Twitter. A week or so ago, I'd say the list was pretty much limited to my dentist and some woman in Arizona who collects porcelain owls. Now, I get regular updates on the activities of quarterback Drew Brees, actor Rainn Wilson and unfortunately the President of the United States.

Let me explain. Considering all the hoopla over Mr. Obama's proclivity for new media, I thought his tweets would be a torrent of 140-character brilliance. I expected gems like, "Note to Ag Dept: Plant soybeans on the National Mall. World hunger=solved!" Or maybe I could weigh in on difficult decisions: "Suspected terrorist spotted in Yemen. RT if I should launch the drones!" At the very least, I thought I'd get some inside scoops. "Spilled coffee on the presidential slacks. Bummer." Or, "I just bet Sebelius that Biden will be asleep before Cabinet meeting ends. LOL."

Quoted

It's just that he is the Leader of the Free World, and his tweets are ... well, boring. Seriously, Bob Dole's are infinitely more amusing, and he's just hanging out in Kansas.

Instead, I've received a stream of political pabulum.

He tweets things like, "We can't miss this chance to fix our broken immigration system," and, "We have a sense of energy and dynamism." There is nothing wrong with that. Of course he should promote his views, and heaven knows my tweets are often pretty weak. It's just that he is the Leader of the Free World, and his tweets are…well, boring. Seriously, Bob Dole's are infinitely more amusing, and he's just hanging out in Kansas.

Maybe I'm missing some secret code. When Mr. Obama tweets, "The bill before the Senate isn't perfect," perhaps he actually means, "Hey, everyone who sees Rand Paul today, offer him some hair mousse!" But probably not.

My complaint is not about his politics. I'm agnostic on that. I'm just so disappointed with the lack of ideas, imagination and inspiration, that I'm not sure I'll follow him much longer. Which, come to think of it, seems to be the problem he has with many Democrats these days.

HENRY CAVILL

The Man of Steel says that the modern superhero is more vulnerable and realistic: "We want to think that maybe our hero will lose, but then he wins."

THE NEW SUPERMAN

Iron Man gets the best jokes. Batman gets the best films. Wonder Woman gets the best plane (invisible!). And Hulk? Well, Hulk smash! But Superman started it all. Now 75 years old, the galaxy's most famous Kryptonian is back in "Man of Steel," a grounded take on the icon, directed by Zack "Watchmen" Snyder. In the film — an origin story — the young alien is scuttled to Earth, grows up, meets a girl (Amy Adams) and defends our planet from the evil General Zod (Michael Shannon).

He also mopes around — a lot. In a tonal continuation of "The Dark Knight" series, our hero has feelings, and they add an extra dimension that the creators (including producer Christopher Nolan) hope to make the character less boring and more relevant.

Henry Cavill, a British actor best known for TV's "The Tudors," stars as the Man of Steel. We had to ask him why he's not so steely after all.

We've gone from square-jawed demigods to heroes that have to show vulnerability or a flaw. What do you think of that progression?
Well, when they were initially conceived, we needed them — desperately. We needed them to be strong-jawed superheroes — the classic hands-on-hips, nothing-can-touch-me, bullets bouncing off them [kind]. I mean, when Superman first came around, we were out of World War I and World War II was sort of creeping up. We needed those guys who could flit around the place and do wonderful things, and we could fantasize about all the world's problems being solved.

And now?
And now they've evolved into a more modern, more realistic thing to go with the times, so that the stories are still interesting. People these days don't find the immovable object interesting — the untouchable thing and the hero who will always win. We want to think that maybe our hero will lose, but then he wins. We must be able to associate with them. They've become less of a fantasy and more of an ideal to strive toward.

What has the Superman done to make him more relatable?
We've given him a very human essence. As much as he's not susceptible to the frailties of the human physical body, he's very much susceptible to the frailties of the human psyche. And that is what really makes us in touch with someone else, makes us go, "I know your pain" or, "Yeah, I've felt that happy before."

"The Dark Knight" director Christopher Nolan produced "Man of Steel" and has made the DC Comics world feel tethered to reality more than to cartoons.
It ties in very much with the evolution of the superhero. We need to see them in a real-world setting. It helps us to feel more and to be a part of the story. And that's important to me. I've never played this sort of, "OK, I'm going to talk [in a low, gravelly voice] all of a sudden." If I heard someone talking that way, I'd look at them funny and say, "Are you OK? Do you need to sit down?" Because they sound like a crazy person. I wanted to play him as a realistic being, just with these incredible powers, and that was up to CGI to fix for me. [Laughs]

Q&A

What do you think audiences need from superheroes now?

"It's the same thing we've always needed, which is that sense of hope. There's always something going wrong in the world. It just shifts depending on the generation. And it's always nice to have that fantasy that there's someone who's going to fix everything. It's beating the odds, and that's been the same with mythological characters since the dawn of time, since we could think up gods — good gods and bad gods. Nothing has changed in the human psyche. We still need that."

About Cavill

- Age. 30
- From. Jersey, off the coast of Normandy (he's British)
- You know him from. "The Tudors"
- He was considered for. Cedric Diggory in "Harry Potter"; Edward Cullen in "Twilight"; James Bond in "Casino Royale"; Superman in "Superman Returns"
- How being an actor is like being Superman. "It's a lonely existence, and that I could pour straight into the character. And also that search for acceptance."
- Essential reading. "The ones I like the most are 'Death of Superman,' 'The Return of Superman,' and 'Red Son,'" he says. "And I love some of the Superman/Batman ones. The particular one I read which stuck in my head was 'The Search for Kryptonite.' Batman is just getting peeved at Superman trying to be really helpful because he's got that super-strength and he can do things that Batman can't. But then at the finish of the book you see that Batman's got all the different kinds of kryptonite in a room, and you're going, 'Oh s—.' I just love the interaction between the two."

Q&A

Teaming up

There's been a great deal of talk about plans for a Justice League movie. Do you feel a natural sense of competition with the Avengers, which is owned by rival company Marvel?
I mean, of course there's going to be a sense of competition because it's groups of superheroes coming together, of course there is. I don't like to think of it as competition. But people will naturally put the two together as competitors.

Eventually there has to be a World Cup of Superheroes.
Right. [Laughs]

So who would win?
OK. The difference between the Marvel heroes and the DC heroes is that DC heroes are godlike, all of them, where Marvel heroes, you might get one like Thor but otherwise they're very human. So in a head- to-head ... who knows?

You can take sides.
No, I'm not going to pick a side because I don't think it's fair because anything can happen. A plan never survives first contact. So ... yeah. But it would be very cool.

CHRIS HARDWICK
CREATOR OF NERDIST

THE SUPERSENSITIVE SUPERHERO

Chris Hardwick, creator of the Nerdist podcast and YouTube channel, tells Metro reporter Ned Ehrbar why Superman has to cry.

Superman: "I have so many feelings!" / WB

We've definitely become more of a culture of wanting to identify with characters, rather than wanting to see characters that we couldn't be. It's not just movies and superheroes. When you look at protagonists in television, they're kind of crappy people. There's Don Draper or Dexter or Walter White. They're not one or the other — they're muddy.

What you see coming out now — after the era of '90s superhero movies — is sort of like the transition between glam rock and grunge, where you have the square-jawed heroes being phased out. They're kind of one-dimensional, there's not really much of an arc, they're just there to facilitate all of the action and just sort of be the opposing force to evil. But now people want to see more humanity, and I honestly think that has a lot to do with the Internet.

The way we interact with the Internet, the way that we're all in each other's business with YouTube and vlogs, we're just used to seeing humans. And that's what we're identifying with, seeing other humans. People are bored by the one-dimensional, "oh, he can do anything" hero because what's at stake then? What are they battling? We've seen so much of it up to this point that the one place that superheroes hadn't really gone, at least in film yet, is inward.

What works in "Man of Steel" is just the idea of taking the heroes off the pedestal and going, "They're still … if not humans, then creatures. Creatures with struggles." Because that's what people get wrapped up in, story and struggle and not just, "Oh look, he's better than everyone else." It's the idea that he's not better than everyone. And Superman has a lot of struggles in the movie, more so than just, "Oh, he's got superpowers and he beats the crap out of those guys and it's all going to be fine because he's indestructible." People have seen that. You still want your healthy dose of action scenes, but then you want to identify with the characters.

Superman, who? Meet a real-life, high-flying hero

Matsumurav / CONTRIBUTED

Radioactive Man: The animal savior of Fukushima

When Fukushima's nuclear reactor exploded in 2011, all people living in the area were evacuated. All except rice farmer Naoto Matsumura, 53. Just 6 miles from the plant, the town had a population of 16,000. Now it is only Matsumura there, with 17 times the safe level of radiation. He shelters the region's wildlife, caring for everything from feral dogs to ostriches. He has the highest known level of radiation in Japan, which causes gradual cellular breakdown, but he may not feel the effects for 40 years.

Jetman: Leaping the Alps in a single bound

The Wright brothers may have been the ultimate aeronautical dreamers with the first airplane flight, but no one has come closer than Yves Rossy to making a human fly.

Rossy, aka Jetman, is a former fighter pilot who says he had always dreamed of being a bird since he first witnessed an air show as a 13-year-old. The inspiration drove him to invent and patent a series of jetpacks that would fire him through even more epic and courageous voyages. From the first experiments in 2006, Rossy made his first public flight two years later, which took him over the Alps at speeds close to 200 miles per hour, at heights of 3,000 feet. The charismatic Swiss even found a moment to execute a 360-degree roll and later quipped, "That was to impress the girls."

This was followed by a 22-mile journey across the English Channel to France, which he completed in under 10 minutes, becoming the first man to make the distance with a jet pack. The feat was broadcast live across the world with great uncertainty surrounding the outcome as Rossy himself confessed his calculations were fallible.

Since then he has continued to break ground and world records for distance. In 2009, he performed the first intercontinental jet flight, and went on to fulfill a deeply held personal ambition to fly along the Grand Canyon. Not all of his missions have been successful, having crash-landed off the Spanish coast when the weather turned threatening. Rossy is devoted to spreading his message — pursue your dreams and "always have a Plan B." His TED talk remains one of the most downloaded, and he has also won praise for philanthropic efforts, such as performing shows for the benefit of disabled pilot school Aerobility. Rossy also hosts master classes for the next generation of jetpack pilots, which will surely produce the next great flying human.

Muscle Man: 'This is what I do for my country'

Egypt's economy suffered after the 2011 revolution that deposed President Hosni Mubarak, and Sayed Al-Essawy, now 27, took it upon himself to revive the nation's tourism industry with a fight to the death against a lion in front of the pyramids of Giza, proclaiming, "This is what I want to do for my country."

The self-styled "world's strongest man" had noble intentions but was met by criticism from animal rights groups and the Egyptian tourist board distanced itself. Nonetheless, Al-Essawy entered the arena with shield and sword and took on the lion, although the animal looked bored. Man defeated beast. The gladiator was subsequently arrested, yet supporters point to the re-opening of the pyramids and other major attractions after the fight as proof that Al-Essawy was a national hero.

A TRUE AVENGER

Mia Grace Montross, age 4, became famous on YouTube after her father quizzed her on comics. Here, we ask her to save the world.

MONTROSS AS BATGIRL, ALTHOUGH AT HEART, SHE'S A MARVEL GIRL

SKIP MONTROSS

"Who's the God of Thunder?"
"Thor."
"Who's Thor's brother?"
"Loki."
"Where do they live?"
"Asgard."
"What is Captain America's shield made of?"
"Vibranium."

Did you answer any of those correctly? If not, you'd lose in a trivia contest to Mia Grace Montross, age 4. When her father, Skip, editor of DaddyDadBlog.com, quizzed her on insanely difficult Marvel trivia during a car ride, the video went viral.

"Between 'The Super Hero Squad Show' and the comics I read her, she's just a comic freak," her dad says. "She loves her comic books." We wondered if all that training would pay off, so we put forth some real-world scenarios to see how she'd solve them.

First of all, why do you love superheroes so much?
Because I like them, and they save the day.

Who is your favorite?
I like Ms. Marvel, and Scarlet Witch because Scarlet Witch can shoot stuff out of her hands. Ms. Marvel because of her yellow hair, like mine.

If you were a superhero, what would your name be? What special powers would you have?
Wanda. Shooting stuff from my hands.

OK, let's talk through some situations. A short bad guy has access to a lot of weapons and keeps threatening to blow up the world. What would you do to save the world?
I would destroy the villains.

A lot of the world has food but some countries don't, and they are starving and hungry. How would you feed people?
I would shoot food out of my hands.

Some people like to take a special medicine that makes them feel really good, but other people say the medicine is bad because it turns people into monsters. With your super-intelligence, who would you say is more right?
Superheroes are right. Medicine is good.

There's this special energy source that can provide everyone in the world with power, but it's very rare. How would you use your superpowers to make sure everyone has access to the energy source?
I would just defeat the villains. In January, I'm going to turn 5.

Some people are getting sick because an alien virus is attacking them. How would you use your powers to cure them?
I would defeat the aliens and give them chicken soup.

OK, last one: It's very important that everyone gets treated with kindness and respect, no matter who they are. How would you use your superpowers to make sure that everyone gets treated equally?
They have to share. I would just tell them they have to share.

Unleashing one's own Superman with comic book artist Scott Snyder

What do you get for the superhero who has everything? Scott Snyder decided to celebrate Superman's diamond anniversary by writing "the kind of story I would tell if I got just one chance to tell a Superman story."

The result is "Superman Unchained," a new series that pits the Man of Steel against a new adversary while reprising many of the characters and places that have been integral to the red-caped icon since his 1938 debut in "Action Comics #1."

"I wanted it to feel both classic and fresh at the same time," Snyder says. "So you'll see all the things that you love about the Superman mythology, but there will be elements that really shake it up."

Snyder, who has received acclaim for his work on Batman comics in recent years, calls writing for Superman "intimidating." The first issue, featuring art by DC Comics co-publisher Jim Lee, hit stands on Wednesday, the same day as Snyder's latest Batman effort, and coincides with a number of other 75th birthday celebrations — not least of which is the release of the new movie, "Man of Steel."

In addition, a new video game and a new online game are being released this year, as well as a new animated movie. In New York, Midtown Comics is celebrating this week with a sale and a bit of Superman swag.

"It's hugely exciting and a very big honor to be part of a tide of excitement this year that's about putting Superman back in the spotlight," Snyder says. "I think even though he's the first and in a lot of ways the greatest superhero, people sometimes take him for granted because he's been there for so long." SHAUN BRADY

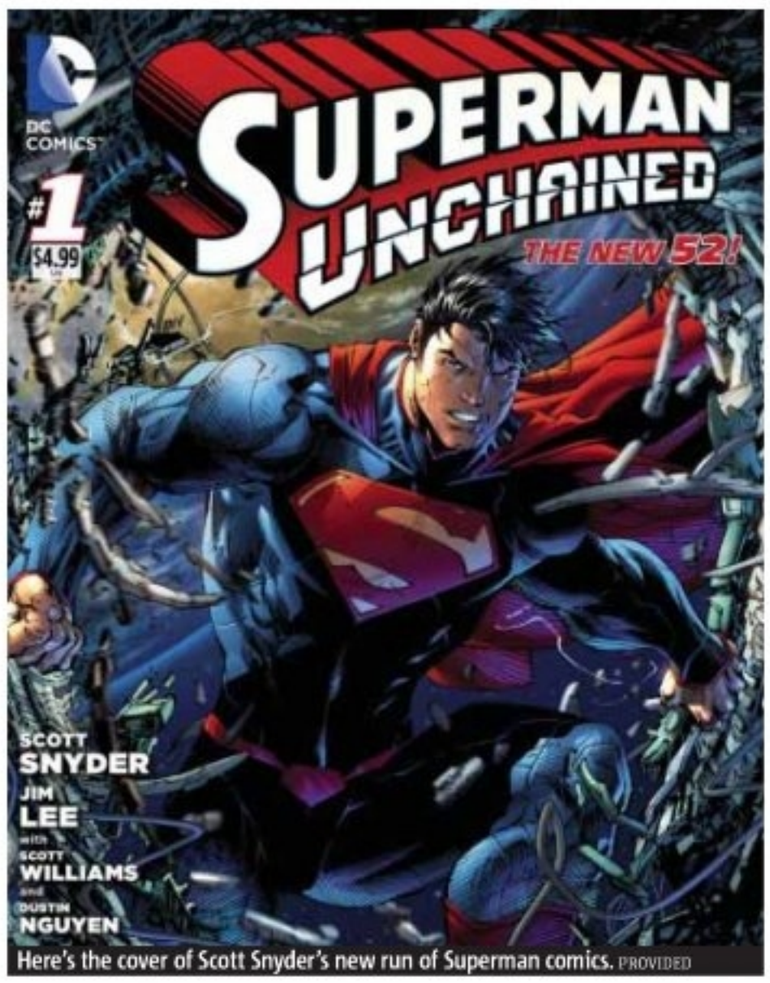
Staying power

Snyder says that he feels Superman has managed to persist in the popular imagination for three-quarters of a century because, "He always stands up for what's right."

- "I think there's always a place and a relevance for that. At the core, I think what's made him appealing over all these years is that he represents the best of us. He might be an alien, but he's the most deeply human character in all of comics."



Here's the cover of Scott Snyder's new run of Superman comics. PROVIDED

The universe of Kanye

We're just lucky enough to live in it. On the eve of his new album, "Yeezus," we look at the rapper's awesome awesomeness. / MICHELLE CASTILLO

COLLABORATORS

"Entourage" 2007 – In one episode, Kanye saved the day when he offered to take Vinny Chase and co. to Cannes on his private plane.

Bon Iver 2010/2013 – Two tracks from "My Beautiful Dark Twisted Fantasy" —"Woods" and "Monster" — featured the folk artist's efforts. They work together again on "Yeezus."

Takashi Murakami 2007 – The poppy Japanese artist designed the "Graduation" cover and directed the video for "Good Morning."

"The Cleveland Show" 2010 – Kanye stars as Kenny West, Cleveland Jr.'s rival, on the "Family Guy" spinoff. He's reprised his role in four additional episodes since.

Skrillex 2013 – Kanye and the Dubstep king confirmed they collaborated on a track for "Yeezus"

DAFT PUNK 2007/2013 – HE SAMPLED THE FRENCH DUO'S "HARDER, BETTER, FASTER, STRONGER" ON "STRONGER" AND THEY HELPED OUT WITH THREE OR FOUR "JOINTS" (AS KANYE PUT IT) ON "YEEZUS."

CONTROVERSIES

Kanye vs. AIDS 2005 — During a Live 8 tour, Kanye announces that AIDS was a "man-made disease ... placed in Africa just like crack was placed in the black community to break up the Black Panthers."

Kanye on "South Park" 2009 – Fueled by his massive ego, a cartoon "Kanye" goes into a murderous rage after not getting a joke. "It hurts my feelings," he wrote on his blog, "but what can you expect."

Kanye vs. Bush 2005 – "George Bush doesn't care about black people," Kanye announces during a benefit for Hurricane Katrina, broadcast to millions. Bush called it "one of the most disgusting moments."

Kanye vs. Taylor Swift 2009 – You remember the below. West would apologize to Swift for interrupting her MTV award win, but took back the apology just this week.

Kanye as Jesus 2006 – One-upping John Lennon, Yeezy poses as Jesus for cover of Rolling Stone.

OBAMA VS. KANYE 2009 / 2012 – AFTER HIS MTV ANTICS, THE PRESIDENT CALLED WEST A "JACKASS" — TWICE. "I DON'T GIVE A F— WHAT THE PRESIDENT'S GOT TO SAY," KANYE RAPPED.

Kanye as Hitler 2011 – Kanye says that people look at him as if he's Hitler, during a British concert. The crowd boos.

LOVERS

Amber Rose 2008 to 2010 – It put the model into the limelight. She's now engaged to Wiz Khalifa.

Alexis Phifer 2002 to 2008 — Kanye proposed to the designer in 2006, but they never married.

Melody Thornton 2010 – Kanye was seen holding hands and attending red carpet events with the former Pussycat Doll.

Brooke Crittendon 2004 — While taking a break from Phifer, Kanye dated the "Harlem Heights" star.

KIM KARDASHIAN 2012 TO PRESENT – WEST IS EXPECTING HIS FIRST CHILD WITH THE REALITY TV STAR, WHO ALSO INSPIRED TRACKS LIKE "COLD."

Selita Ebanks 2010 — After the Victoria's Secret model starred in his "Runaway" video, the two reportedly got together.

Jay-Z 2000 to present – A true bromance. The two superstar rappers have worked together forever, and toured with "Watch the Throne." Why? "I needed to connect with Jay," Kanye told the New York Times this week.

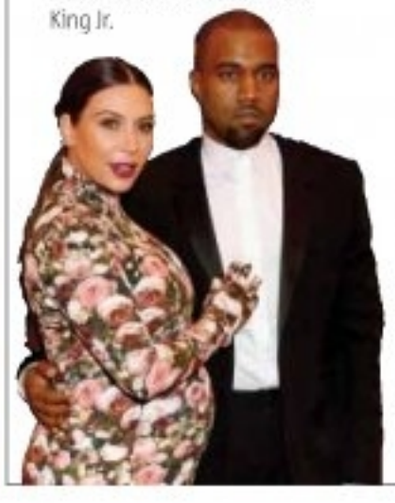
LIFESTYLE

Fatburger 2008 – Kanye opened up a branch of the chain in his hometown of Chicago, but it closed down in February, 2011.

Nike Air Yeezy 2009, 2012 — The rapper was the first nonathlete to work with the brand, and has released two editions to date.

Louis Vuitton X Kanye West 2009 – The rapper released three styles of high-top sneakers — Don's, Jasper's and Mr. Hudson's — and announced his intent to change his name to Martin Louis the King Jr.

Donda West Plastic Surgery Law 2009 — California governor Arnold Schwarzenegger signed a law requiring people to undergo a physical examination before undergoing plastic surgery after Kanye's mother dies during a cosmetic procedure.



Met Ball 2013 – Yeezy was put on Vogue's Best Dressed at the Met Ball list— but they cropped out his date, the floral couch-wearing Kim Kardashian.

DW KANYE WEST 2011 – KANYE DEBUTED THE FIRST COLLECTION FROM HIS FASHION LINE, WHICH WAS NAMED AFTER HIS DECEASED MOTHER, DURING PARIS FASHION WEEK. IT GARNERED LACKLUSTER REVIEWS, BUT NOW HE'S ON THE MAP.

What a gas it is getting old

Jagger still has the "moves like Jagger." The Stones play the TD Garden again on Friday night. / PAUL MAROTTA/GETTY IMAGES

The Rolling Stones know they're old, and they know you're old too. During the first few songs on Wednesday, the video screen behind the band showed the faces of fans in the audience at the TD Garden, juxtaposed with montages of screaming teenagers from when the band was at the height of cultural relevance. The live feed didn't capture such youthful frenzy, but the Fifty and Counting tour is not about pretending that the audience or the band members — most of whom are in their late 60s — are still young. It's not about denying the passing of time, but celebrating what the band did in that time. Accordingly, the set was mostly comprised of songs that defined those times.

The band had difficulty getting warmed up, after entering the tongue-shaped stage through the giant set of lips that has been the band's logo for at least 40 of those 50 years. But by the time they launched into their fourth song, "Gimme Shelter," it was intense enough to make anybody in the audience almost feel like this was the poignant music of the present.

From that song on, the band members found their balance, with the intricate parts of the songs fitting together like a jigsaw puzzle. Keith Richards' greatest skill is still finding the unexpected pockets of rhythm and knowing when not to play.

The Stones were joined by a handful of special guests, completing the puzzle, most notably guitarist Mick Taylor, who played on what were arguably the Stones' best albums and quit in the early 1970s. Mick Jagger's voice sounded as vibrant on Wednesday night as it has ever sounded on live recordings, and his dancing could have worn out many a rocker one quarter of his age.

Punk rock backbone

Interview. Transplants singer Rob Aston on the glue that binds this all-star power trio.

With the members constantly working on a multitude of projects, it's no wonder that it took so long for Transplants to release new material. To say that drummer Travis Barker, guitarist Tim Armstrong and singer Rob Aston have kept themselves busy since disbanding in 2006 is an understatement. After eight years, the trio is back with a new album, "In a Warzone," which still blends punk rock with hip-hop, like on previous releases, but this time the focus is more on punk, says Aston. "We've all grown up listening to different types of music, but punk rock has always been the backbone for all of us," he says. "I personally think that's the best type of music we make together."

To someone who has never listened to you before, how would you describe Transplants?
If you listen to either our first or second album, it's a little harder to describe because there's so much going on. There are punk rock elements, hip-hop elements, dub elements … all kinds of stuff going on. But I always tell people that we're a punk rock band. We do what we want, and that's punk rock.

Were scheduling conflicts between the three of you the main reason why it took so long to make this album?
We took a break after Warped Tour in 2005, but I guess we worked on the new album for about three years before we turned it in. Obviously it wasn't three years straight, because everyone's busy with other projects. So we recorded when we could, and we didn't want to rush this album or turn in something half-a—ed. When you're gone for a long time, you can't come back with just anything. We had to give it our best, and that's what we did. I think it's our best work by far.

Are there any guest vocalists on the new album worth mentioning?
This time around we only put a few guests on the album. We have Paul Wall on one song, and Bun B and Equipto on another. But that's it, just three rappers. It's kind of funny that this is a punk rock album, but the guests we have are rappers. But that's true to Transplants form. We've always put people on our albums that you normally wouldn't think would be on an album like ours.

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's a mixed bag

Superhero saga.
Superman almost returns in this noisy, mindless new reboot.

Amy Adams' Lois Lane is really into Henry Cavill's Superman in "Man of Steel." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Today's comic book movies are self-serious to a fault, and for that you can blame the first Christopher Reeve "Superman" from 1978. Frivolous junk for pre-adolescent boys (and the nostalgic adults they would become) was suddenly treated like grandiose American myth, complete with a sleepy Marlon Brando, top-billed and extravagantly paid, as Superman's dad. "Superman Returns" tried to ape this style, and its failure — it "only" made $400 million — sent producers to start from scratch. A lot of what they came up with is roughly the same as before, but still succumbs to many of today's blockbuster annoyances.

Like the '78 "Superman," "Man of Steel" opens with the death of Krypton and the punishment of mutinous fascist General Zod (Michael Shannon). Here, Zod gets to kill Jor-El (a regal Russell Crowe), but not before the latter sends his son to an uncertain future on Earth. Zod re-enters the picture, demanding that humanity hand over the now-adult flying humanoid (Henry Cavill). Kal-El/Clark Kent/Superman, now a brooding drifter yet to take up journalism, must decide whether to comply or fight.

He doesn't have much deciding to do. Though shepherded by Christopher Nolan, this is surprisingly light on thought. A heavy first half, which regulates snippets of S-Man's youth to Nolan-style flashbacks, makes way for a solid hour of bombast, smackdowns and widespread destruction. Those who enjoyed major cities being leveled — with presumably thousands of off-screen deaths — in "Transformers 3" and "The Avengers" will get a kick out of Metropolis receiving even worse treatment. The fight between our hero and Zod's minions begins with a thrashing of Smallville's 7-Elevens and IHOPs.

The brute force, brought by a relatively tempered Zack Snyder ("300") is impressive, at least at first: When the belligerent Kryptonians start wreaking havoc, things feel genuinely dangerous. These scenes, alas, subscribe to what could be dubbed J.J. Abrams syndrome. As in his "Star Trek" pictures, thoughtful problem solving is replaced by mindless action. When Superman has to overpower a spaceship, there's no strategy and no real doubt that it will all work out.

Overqualified actors make up for lots. Cavill, who never has to play nerdy Clark (not yet, anyway), is a fine Superman, imposing but wry. Though Shannon's Zod is no Terrence Stamp in "Superman II," he's hammy fun, while Amy Adams' Lois Lane is nearly as plucky and flirty as Margot Kidder. But like most of today's blockbusters, it's a mixed bag of promise and disappointment, a picture hobbled by aural and visual noise.

'Shadow Dancer'

In "Shadow Dancer," Andrea Riseborough plays a member of the Irish Republican Army who, in 1993, plants a bomb in a subway station. Her plan is thwarted, and she's blackmailed by a rugged MI5 officer (Clive Owen) into playing rat, informing on her connected family so as not to be separated from her young son. Director James Marsh, who made "Man on Wire," offers a cool, detached tone that's nonetheless sick with claustrophobic dread. For most of the length, there doesn't appear to be any way out for Colette, nor anyone else. It's a thinking person's thriller, but it can't help but trade in stock situations. The evolution of Colette and Mac's relationship — is it interrogation, or is it love? — is an element from a less smart picture. MATT PRIGGE

Needs a better ending

Apocalypse comedy. The Apatow boys try to reinvigorate their brand.

James Franco, Jonah Hill, Craig Robinson and the rest try to survive the apocalypse in "This is the End." / SUZANNE HANOVER

With "Pineapple Express," screenwriters/bros Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg hit upon an inspired, if counterintuitive pairing: An action film, a genre that requires agency and invention, populated by stoner slackers. Stars Rogen and James Franco could riff their way out of any narrative dead-ends.

The same notion applies to "This is the End," in which most of today's comedy scene, playing themselves, go to a party at James Franco's "Scarface"-ian manse — only to get gorily dispatched by what turns out to be the Christian rapture. All that's left are Rogen, Franco, Jay Baruchel, Jonah Hill, Craig Robinson and Danny McBride, cowering inside Franco's house while fire and demons rage outside. They have little to do but riff on their personas. Franco gets gay rumor jokes. Oscar-nominee Hill is all Hollywood positivity (and apparently sincere, which makes him more hilariously grating). McBride somehow proves more evil and twisted than "Eastbound & Down"'s Kenny Powers.

The Apatow name has stumbled a bit since it crashed unexpectedly into the mainstream. "This is the End" plays in part as a re-establishing of the brand, with the stars all (or mostly all) coming together. They can still banter, one-upping each other into left-field one-liners. Meanwhile, cokehead Michael Cera gets impaled on a pole far too quickly. (Don't worry: He reprises the obnoxious jerk routine in two forthcoming no-budget Argentine art-comedies.)

It's a shame things wind up whittled down to its two writers' sensibilities. The more ambitious, or at least funnier, characters get picked off, leaving us with Rogen and Goldberg stand-in Baruchel, who only want to smoke weed, eat burgers and stare at the former's 3-D television. Surely writers who toked less would come up with an ending that's truly, awe-inspiringly, awesomely insane, rather than the fanboy anticlimax that results. Perhaps they should switch to acid.

Eau de Honey Boo Boo

When a press release appeared in our inbox announcing that the season premiere of "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo" next month would be a "watch n' sniff" episode, we threw up in our mouths a little bit. This is a real thing, by the way — couldn't make something like this up if we wanted to. According to the release, viewers of the TLC reality show about the morbidly obese Boo Boo gang can watch the July 17 premiere while scratching and sniffing some sort of scented card that will be distributed in issues of People magazine on July 15. What could Eau de Boo Boo possibly smell like? Sweat, bacon and shame, with shades of Funions? Also, what kind of people would be into this sort of thing? The thought of even watching that show is unpleasant enough, without adding some sort of hillbilly aromatherapy to the experience. That said, we're 100 percent going to grab a copy of People next month to give this thing a hearty sniff and report back. Stay tuned.

Someone please help Farrah already

Forget Amanda Bynes — can someone out there please stage an intervention for former "Teen Mom" star Farrah Abraham? The poor girl is caught in a shame spiral of EF5 proportions. In the latest in a long and sticky string of bad life decisions, InTouch reports that Abraham has undergone her second boob job (and her fourth plastic surgery in less than three years). She is 22 years old, FYI.
In other news that makes us cringe/want to adopt both her and her daughter (who is most certainly going to need extensive adult therapy one day), Abraham was just on Howard Stern's Sirius show sharing that she loved to masturbate to her own sex tape/porno "Farrah Superstar: Backdoor Teen Mom." A sex tape that co-star porn actor James Deen is purportedly not even happy to have appeared in. When even a dude who rails ladies on tape for a living is displeased to have railed you on tape, you've really taken a wrong turn somewhere in life. Luckily, TMZ reported Thursday that, according to a text convo the two had, Charlie "Tiger Blood" Sheen is totes willing to go on a date with her. Oh, we bet.

Old man parts get a boost

Are we the only ones who find this whole "ball ironing" thing simultaneously disgusting and fascinating? For some reason, people are just now all amped up about that time, five years ago, when George Clooney joked to Esquire that he had the wrinkles in his old balls ironed out (the male equivalent of a labiaplasty — which is another disgusting and fascinating thing, by the way). Now, Salon has reported that this is an actual Thing called "tackle-tightening" and that dudes are totally into it. Are they? Are grown men into paying money to have some doctor surgically freshen up their testes? Because we're pretty sure most men we know don't give a damn about what those things down there look like..

Rupert Murdoch: Now an eligible bachelor!

Speaking of saggy old testicles, NY Mag reports that media titan and super-rich old dude, 82-year-old Rupert Murdoch has filed for divorce from his 38-year-old wife Wendi Deng. This brings us to two points. One: Murdoch is a total pimp. How much of a baller (ha ha) do you have to be when your geriatric a— feels OK about kicking your hot, under-40 wife to the curb? And two: How bad is it for 30-something women out there that it's becoming difficult to hang on to your octogenarian man?

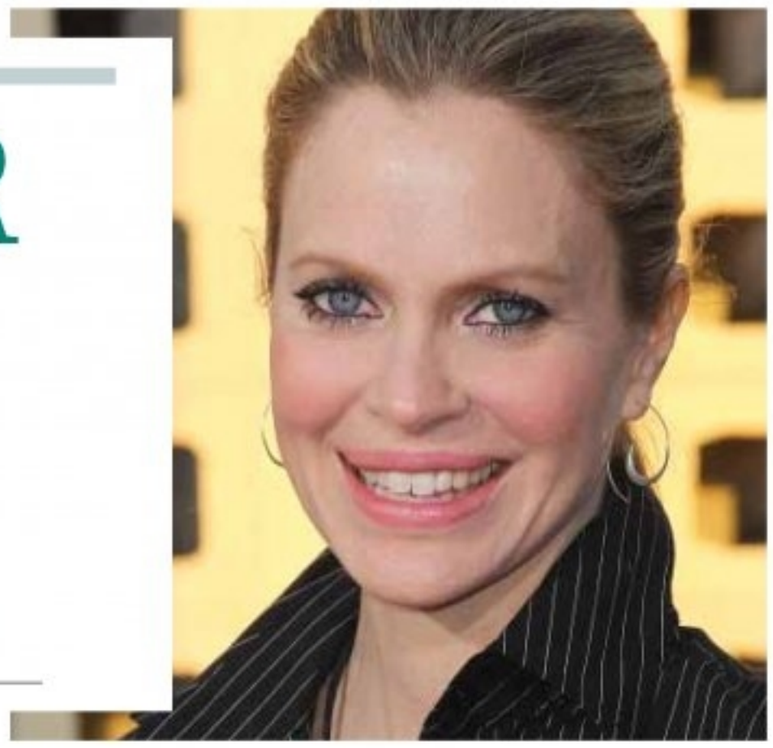
The Duchess of Cambridge is on a boat

Evidence that the royals are just redundant figureheads: One super-important royal duty that the Duchess of Cambridge had to take care of recently included blessing the newest ship in Princess Cruises' fleet. The only woman capable of such a task, the very pregnant Kate apparently smashed a giant champagne bottle on the cruise ship's helm in order to officially christen it "Royal Princess." She then said, "I name this ship Royal Princess. May God bless her and all who sail in her." David Cameron must have been off on some sort of other really important business, because we find it hard to believe he would shirk an important political duty like this of his own volition.

KRISTIN BAUER VAN STRATEN

The actress from "True Blood" prefers playing a vampire.

BEING HUMAN BITES



When we last left HBO's "True Blood," the war between the humans and the vampires had just reached a boiling point, and the air was thick with the threat of impending violence — well, more violence. Pam — the bisexual, acid-tongued, bar-owning vampire who stomps all over human and vamp underlings alike — exacts violence and comedy in equally skilled measure.

Pam has really evolved. At first, she was straight-up evil, but now they're revealing more layers to all of the characters. Do you think she's more good than bad?
I don't know if it is a bad sign, or if I'm becoming sort of delusional, but I don't know if she's good or evil. But I feel like what she says, we're all thinking. You know, she only kills bad people. I feel like she's a little bit of the person we all wish we could be, but we wouldn't be able to maintain jobs and friends. [Laughs] To be on top of the food chain, she doesn't have to worry about liking anybody or vice-versa — people liking her, especially.

There are more powerful female characters in the show than weak ones. In fact, there are maybe more powerful female characters than powerful male characters. Do you think that's true?
Yup, I agree with you. These writers, I think, are very sensitive to writing strong female characters. And in my career, that's just been rare. I haven't personally gotten to play terribly strong characters before this. I really enjoyed the characters I played, but they were vulnerable, possibly not too bright — you know, using sexuality to try and get by. I think it's a combination of HBO, Alan Ball and our other producers that are sensitive to this. I mean, this week we have a woman [director of photography], which is unusual. We have a lot of women directors. We were sitting around Video Village this week, and someone was reading an article about the astoundingly small percentage of females in top positions in Hollywood, and we looked up and realized that there were seven women and only one guy … in that area. We had a woman producer, a woman script supervisor, me and then just one guy. And I thought, "Wow, what a lovely world for a woman to be in." It's so unusual.

Pam and other female characters do use their sexuality as a tool, but it's in an empowered way, not in a weak way.
Yeah, that's Pam. I think everyone in "True Blood" is very sexual, but definitely from the vampire perspective — they're always in charge. They're in the leadership role in all of their relationships. It's probably another reason why we as a culture love to watch vampires. You know, we get to escape our regular roles and our regular lives.

This treat takes the Retro Cake

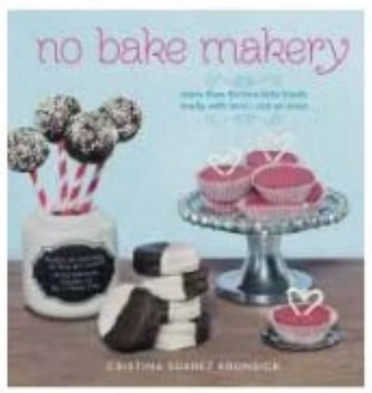
"Serving size really helps with the presentation," says Krumsick about her mini-treats, "because everything that's smaller tends to be cuter." / JEREMY KRUMSICK

Recipe. As the summer heat rolls in, our desire to use an oven rolls out.

Warm temps are no match for the cute and tasty two-bite treats that Cristina Suarez Krumsick, chef of No Bake Makery, creates without ever turning on an oven.

Her go-to appliance: the fridge. "You assemble the cake or pie and let the refrigerator do the work instead," she says about the recipes found in her new cookbook, "No Bake Makery: More than 80 Two-Bite Treats Made with Lovin', Not an Oven."

So go ahead, take dessert duty at your next barbecue — just don't tell 'em your secret.



Retro Cake

1 Line an 8x8-inch pan with aluminum foil and set aside.

2 Line the bottom of the pan with cookies (about 20). You may need to break some up to get them to fit just right.

3 Pour the cold water into a small bowl and sprinkle the gelatin over the water; let sit for two minutes.

4 Combine the raspberries, blueberries and sugar in a medium-heavy saucepan and cook over medium-low heat, stirring a few times, until the sugar dissolves and the mixture becomes warm to the touch.

5 Stir in the gelatin mixture. Remove from the heat and let cool to room temperature, stirring occasionally. Set aside.

6 Combine the heavy cream and vanilla in a large bowl and mix using an electric mixer until stiff peaks form, three to four minutes.

7 Gently fold in the cooled raspberry mixture, taking care not to deflate the cream.

8 Pour about half the mixture into the prepared pan and smooth it with a rubber spatula. Insert the remaining wafers into the mousse vertically (this will make your cross section look cool when you slice it later).

9 Spread the remaining mousse over the wafers and smooth with the spatula.

10 Cover with plastic wrap and freeze overnight.

11 Transfer the cake to a cutting board. Peel away the plastic wrap and slice into 1-inch squares.

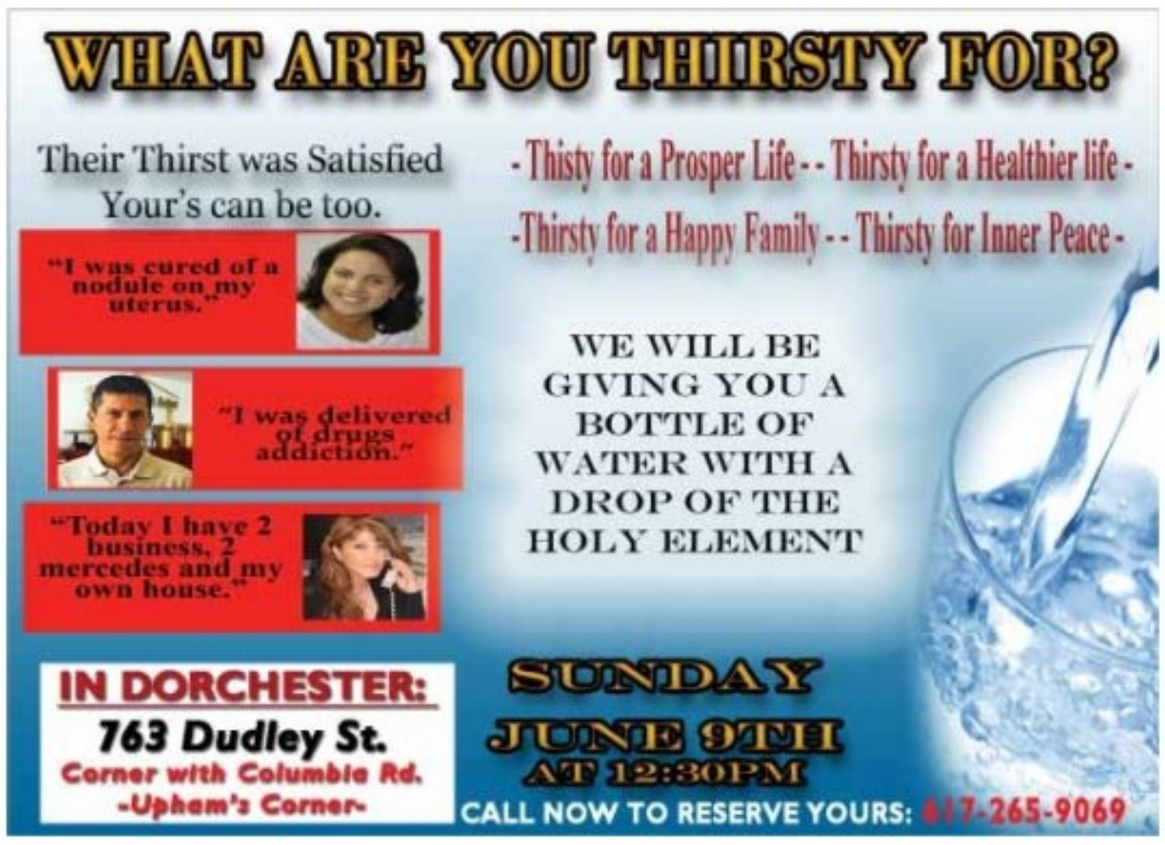
Ingredients

- 30 chocolate wafer cookies (Like Nabisco)
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 1 packet (1 tablespoon) unflavored gelatin (found in the baking section of your grocery store; try Knox brand)
- ¾ cup frozen raspberries
- ¾ cup frozen blueberries
- ¾ cup granulated sugar
- 2 cups cold heavy cream
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract



Street Spinz: Amanda Liu, 20

What was the last song you listened to?
Darude: "Sandstorm"

Who are your three favorite artists?
It's kind of hard to pick a favorite, but I really like Bingo Players, Tim McGraw and maybe Armin Van Buuren.

What's one song on your iPod that you don't want anyone to know about?
Oh, man! Well there's like a Barbie movie called "The Princess and the Popper." I have the whole soundtrack to that. My friends would probably say I was weird, but I'd just be like, whatever.

What's one show this summer you're really excited about?
I think I might be going to Country Fest, but I go to a lot of shows with DJs. I'm really into house music.

Scientists have learned a lot about some surprising subjects from studying the hive-minded menace known as the locust. This Australian biologist's lecture, "Law of the Locusts: What Insect Swarms Teach Us about Cannibalism, Aging and Human Obesity," will provide the latest updates, including fascinating insights into human crowd psychology — we might be more like locusts than we like to think.

This nine-day series of plays, storytellers and classes is organized by Whistler in the Dark and inspired by the mythological worldview of Joseph Campbell, which places the stories we tell and get told at the center of human psychology. Each night is something different. Tickets are pay-what-you-can, which is great for the cash-strapped, having-trouble-finding-a-summer-job set.

Expert Pick: Samuel Monsour, Chef at jm Curley

"Next week is action packed with fine cultural events. On Tuesday (June 18) I'm doing a "Reel Chefs" at the Revere Hotel. They're screening the "Big Lebowski," and I am preparing a five-course meal inspired by the film. Did I mention I'm an ordained Dude-ist Priest?

WEDNESDAY (JUNE 19) Big Boi is performing at my favorite live venue in town, the Paradise. His solo projects have been some of the freshest hip-hop to be released over the past few years, and his style seems to keep getting fresher and cleaner with age.

SUNDAY (June 23) is something huge. It's called The Northern Alliance Dinner. It's being put on by Matt Jennings, and involves 10 GREAT chefs getting together (at jm Curley) to prepare collaborative courses in an effort to raise dough for the American Farmland Trust. The food is going to be straight bananas. The best part, tickets are still available for all three events!"

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. In matters of small consequence, you're not likely to pay much attention to the details, but if something is important, the opposite will be true.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Don't be surprised if you don't grasp the essence of an idea as quickly as you usually do. It's one of those days when your head is likely to be off in the clouds.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. It behooves you to be more careful concerning your possessions. Pay attention not only to how you handle them, but where you leave them, even for just a minute.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Your friends and family will take you at your word, so think twice before speaking. What you consider to be merely a comment might be taken as a promise.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Since what you do and what you say are likely to be two different things, you could confuse people. Try to be consistent with both your words and your deeds.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Don't take well-meaning friends' financial tips as gospel. Before making a major purchase or investment, be sure you know what you're getting into.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Instead of giving input on a topic that you know little about, just be a good listener. There is a strong chance that if you flap your gums, you will be challenged.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. Be wary of anybody, even a trusted friend, trying to pry some confidential information out of you. This person's motives might be devious.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. It isn't a great idea to participate in an expensive pastime with a friend who is always reluctant to pay his or her fair share. Why would you expect something to change?

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. If you are having trouble making an important decision, seek advice from more than one person. Each counselor might have some good ideas, but not the complete answer.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Fortunately, you're prepared to work hard, because advancing your career might not be as easy as it usually is. A concerted effort will be required.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Someone you know has been trying to manipulate others into doing his or her work. Don't fall prey to such machinations, and try to put a stop to them.

Manning should be given a medal

Metro's one-sided, pro-prosecution coverage of the Bradley Manning trial is a disgrace to the journalistic profession and a disservice to the American people. Bradley Manning courageously exposed the cold-blooded murder of Iraqi civilians and Reuters journalists committed by American soldiers in Iraq as part of an unjust, unnecessary and illegal war. Bradley Manning is not a traitor but a hero for informing the American people of the atrocities committed in our name, with our tax dollars. If blowing the whistle on war crimes is "aiding the enemy," then the American government has designated its own people as "the enemy."

REBECCA B. WILK, VIA EMAIL

Editor's note: All coverage of the Manning saga in Metro has been drawn from Reuters newswire.

Show a little effing respect

Re: Kanye West does not want to hear the sound of your dumb voice (Metro, June 12) I was compelled to write to you after viewing the Word column written by Alexandra Cavallo.

I am deeply offended by the lack of respect shown in her reference to "Jesus Effing Christ." Since when is it acceptable to so glibly and offensively refer to Jesus Christ in this manner? Why is it deemed acceptable to denigrate the Christian deity? If this reference had been made to the Muslim or Jewish deity, there would be riots.

2013 STANLEY CUP FINAL – BOSTON vs. CHICAGO

The bounce-back Bruins must show up in Game 2

NHL playoffs. The B's have shown to be a resilient group, but will they be able to recover from a crushing defeat in Game 1?

Boston's David Krejci and Chicago's Bryan Bickell get tangled up along the boards in Game 1 Wednesday night. / JONATHAN DANIEL, GETTY IMAGES

In the 2013 postseason, the Bruins don't have to prove their resiliency to anybody. After rallying from a 4-1 deficit in the third period of Game 7 vs. Toronto, this group has earned immense respect and have proven to be emotionally strong and focused. Still, the challenges facing them heading into Game 2 of the Stanley Cup Final on Saturday night (8, NBC) are unique coming off an epic 4-3 triple-overtime loss in Game 1 to the Blackhawks Wednesday at United Center.

It was the first Game 1 the B's have lost in 2013 and also the first time they've trailed in a series. The B's will need to put that gut-wrenching result behind them, but it should be noted that they've been in a similar circumstance before with largely the same core of guys. They rallied from a 2-0 series hole against Vancouver two years ago in the final.

The NHL scheduling gods did both teams a favor by putting an extra day between Games 1 and 2. That coupled with the fact that this occurred in Game 1 (vs. Game 3 against Pittsburgh in the Eastern Conference Finals, a 2OT win by the B's) means that the Bruins have a better chance of overcoming this situation while trying to get a win in Chicago before they return to TD Garden on Monday for Game 3. It's truly tough to say that the Bruins choked away Game 1 despite their pair of two-goal leads.

After Boston went up 2-0 early in the second period on Milan Lucic's second goal of the game, the B's seemed to take the pressure off a bit, which allowed the Blackhawks to slowly work their way back in. Yes, Chicago got plenty of breaks in tying it up, including the third goal that went off Andrew Ference's skate and the overtime winner by Andrew Shaw that deflected off teammate Dave Bolland — but that's hockey. Chalking up the loss to fluky bounces such as that and Jaromir Jagr's redirect that went off the post late in double overtime is a simple excuse.

Only one Blackhawks player played over 40 minutes in the marathon contest as defenseman Duncan Keith had a game-high 48:40 on ice. The Bruins, meanwhile, had three defensemen in the 40-minute club: Dennis Seidenberg (48:36), Ference (45:19) and Zdeno Chara (45:05). Both teams canceled practice on Thursday, which allowed all players, especially the aforementioned to rest their weary bodies.

MATT BURKE

CRITICISM OF WISHY-WASHY DOC RIVERS IN BOSTON LARGELY UNFAIR

So, Celtics head coach Doc Rivers may or may not leave the team he has coached since April 2004.

It's been a long journey to respectability here and across the NBA landscape for Rivers, once considered a horrible in-game coach by most in the early and mid-2000s, before he received some future Hall of Fame help. Today, Rivers is the gold standard of coaching in the league. He commands respect from all and gets it 99.9 percent of the time. Part of the train of thought with him signing a contract extension two years ago was that his presence alone could bring free agents to Boston. Although Jason Terry hasn't exactly worked out, he was a big-name free agent at the time, and Rivers' presence on the C's bench was a huge reason why he landed here. Young guys in the league no longer wearing Celtics green, like Al Jefferson and Tony Allen, swear by Doc, and word spreads quickly in the NBA. In a 2012 Sports Illustrated poll, Rivers was voted by NBA players as the coach they would most like to play for. So while the Celtics look like they are headed back into lottery-land before they flirt with the Larry O'Brien trophy again, Boston will remain one of the league's more respected franchises as long as Rivers is on the bench.

Recently, C's fans have been calling 98.5 The Sports Hub and WEEI. The majority of talk show hosts on both of those stations have actually agreed with their callers that Rivers needs to poop or get off the pot, so to speak, when it comes to making a decision of whether or not to return. This, while the NBA calendar has yet to even turn to the 2013-14 season, with the NBA Finals still going on and with the draft still weeks away. Is it really a crime that Rivers hasn't flat out said that he's returning for his 10th season?

All the great coaches in sports get to a point where they should be allowed to decompress for a month, if not three. Bill Parcells was wishy-washy on returning for nearly every single one of his 19 seasons. Phil Jackson held the Lakers hostage for about a decade. Red Auerbach nearly left the Celtics to coach the Knicks at one point. And then there's our own Bill Belichick. The guy hasn't discussed his contract situation since 2007, and even then it was as vague as that Tim Tebow "press conference" the other day.

Once a great coach has enough clout with a team and a city, he can decide things on his own terms. Rivers has certainly earned it here and definitely deserves better.
